Mel Mahler is Honored by the Better Business Bureau

Nashville, TN – Mel Mahler, President and CEO, of ADS Security was honored by the Better Business Bureau of Middle Tennessee as a finalist for the 9th annual Better Business Ambassador of the Year for 2007. Mr. Mahler was one of five distinguished business leaders in the Middle Tennessee area recognized at a recent ceremony held at Loews Vanderbilt Hotel in Nashville, Tennessee.

Each year the Better Business Bureau of Middle Tennessee honors an individual who has helped further the BBB Mission of ethics and integrity in an extraordinary way. The Better Business Ambassador Award is the BBB's highest recognition given to one person who actively demonstrates personal business ethics, promotes self-regulation to their industry, mentors others in the principles and values of doing business the right way; and most importantly, champions the mission of persona integrity in our free enterprise system.

The BBB states, "The 2007 Nominees exemplify the key traits and principles that establish the character of a business leader. Each has shown conviction and heart to do seemingly small things that foster and support a higher standard in how business is conducted in Middle Tennessee. They have challenged the status quo of their professions; raised the conscience of their industry; and influenced the marketplace with courage and unwavering commitment to be the best they can be while bringing others along with them."

ADS Security, established in 1989 has grown over the last 18 years to over 60,000 customers. The steady growth and leadership has earned the current ranking of the 21st largest electronic security firm in the nation. ADS Security operates in 19 states with 11 branch offices strategically placed throughout the southeastern United States. ADS offers full service life safety needs to residential, commercial and industrial facilities.

ADS Security operates one of the top U.L.-listed Central Station monitoring operations in the United States. Each Central Station Operator at ADS has earned the Five Diamond Central Station Certificate, the highest training certification available in the industry.
